as we see it

Well, we knew it was too good to last. The politicians on television were looking downright pretty in their make-up, and their words flowed like smooth, sylvan streams, so well had they mastered the use of prompters.

But, like all good things, it must end. At least it will end if a bill now before the U. S. Senate passes. The measure would stop the secret use of make-up and prompting devices. A politician could still use those aids, but he'd have to tell his audience about them. Like this, maybe:

"Ladies and gentlemen. I'm using Max Factor Pancake No. 5 on my jowls to cover my beard and No. 3 on my normally shiny nose. I have the beginning of a bald spot, which is covered tonight with brown eyebrow pencil. I didn't have time to memorize my speech, so there's a fellow in front of me holding up big cards with words printed on them. Now then, from the rock-bound etc. . . ."

If the candidate failed to confess his beauty secrets, there would be a penalty—against the station on which he appeared.

The idea behind this seems to be to protect the public from a fellow who looked like, say, Mr. Peepers, making himself up to look like Davy Crockett and bilking viewers into voting for him. The prompting device clause would save us from a candidate with the brains of Howdy Doody who might spiel off a speech just as if he were as smart as Professor McNulty.

Where but in America, as the saying goes, could such an earth-shaking issue come before a nation's highest legislative body? Certainly the Senators need direction on this bill. Make your views known!

'This Is Your Life'-And Then?

RALPH EDWARDS' GUESTS FIND EVERYTHING CHANGED

When not swabbing away at their tears, the millions who regularly watch Ralph Edwards' This Is Your Life on NBC readily perceive that many exciting things are happening to the show's somewhat bewildered "guest stars."

But what happens to a man—or woman—during one of the half-hour Wednesday night biographies is nothing compared to what happens to him after the show is over.

The night Dr. Laurence C. Jones appeared on the program, he was a dedicated but impecunious professor, who for 50 long years had been struggling to establish the Piney Woods College in Mississippi. Today he is the stunned custodian of a $700,000 endowment fund, simply because Ralph Edwards suggested it might be nice if 1,000,000 viewers were to send in a dollar apiece.

"It was the week before Christmas," Edwards says, "and we really didn't expect much of a response."

Dr. Jones himself is hard to get to these days because he has been literally swamped with invitations to speak at breakfasts, luncheons, teas, dinners and lecture halls. An associate says flatly that Edwards has made Dr. Jones "the happiest man in the world" and that the show itself "has become almost a religion with us."

Dr. Jones recently forwarded to Edwards a letter recounting the experience of a Detroit man whose wife, suffering from a "mental relapse," had not spoken a word in six years. On the night of Dr. Jones' appearance, she suddenly said, "I want to send a dollar to that man."

This Is Your Life's most celebrated alumna is probably singer Lillian Roth, the former alcoholic whose biography has been aired on the show three times. Her appearance with Edwards in January, 1953—her first public appearance in 14 years—was chiefly responsible for putting her book, "I'll Cry Tomorrow," on the best-seller list, where it has remained now for almost a year. The book, in turn, has been directly responsible for sending several well-known movie stars to Alcoholics Anonymous.

Understandably, Miss Roth (the first principal subject Edwards ever told in advance that she was to be featured) was reluctant to appear on the show. Edwards convinced her, however, that the story of her life would be an inspiration to others. For herself, it has meant a best-selling book and a long string of lucrative night-club engagements. Moreover, the book has been bought by M-G-M and is scheduled to go into production soon, starring Susan Hayward.

Mae Williams, the hard-luck singer who contracted polio and then broke her back, all within four years, is still flabbergasted over the results of her appearance on the show several months ago.

"A day doesn't go by," she says, "without two or three people stopping me on the street to talk about it. I still get goosebumps all over just thinking about it." She was immediately booked into several "prestige" night spots and is now filming her own half-hour musical TV series.

"Ralph Edwards didn't say a single word about money on that show," she reports, "yet I've received $486 so far from people wanting me to forward it to the Sister Kenny (polio) Foundation."

In Chicago, cab driver Eddie Hamilton, the subject of Edwards' first Mae Williams, on comeback trail, is ▶ readying her own musical TV series.

Edwards' biography of Lillian Roth led to best-selling book, singing jobs and movie.

"remote" for the show, has received 4000 letters from people all over the country. "My life is completely changed," he marvels. "I can't go anywhere without being recognized. I get all kinds of invitations. But really, I'm making less money than I used to. People stop me just to visit—and after all, it's because of them that I received this honor. And the honor means more to me than all the gifts."

Even the career of former Congressman Douglas Stringfellow, the "war hero" who was exposed as a fraud after his appearance on the show, has taken a turn for the better. He's cleaning up on a lecture tour. His subject: "Be Sure Your Sins Will Find You Out."

Dr. Laurence C. Jones, left, discusses his windfall with actor Arthur Franz.

Established stars who have appeared on This Is Your Life have been affected by it, too. An associate of Roy Rogers says the show did more to reveal the real Roy Rogers than a dozen magazine articles could ever have done. "It convinced people," he says, "that the deeply religious side of Roy and Dale is not just a publicity stunt."

Joan Caulfield says flatly that This Is Your Life is the reason she landed the co-starring role with Barry Nelson in My Favorite Husband, now nearing the end of its second year on CBS. And there was a tremendous demand from TV stations for the old Laurel & Hardy films after the comics appeared—a demand which has since led Hal Roach, Jr., to map out a new hour-long series for them.

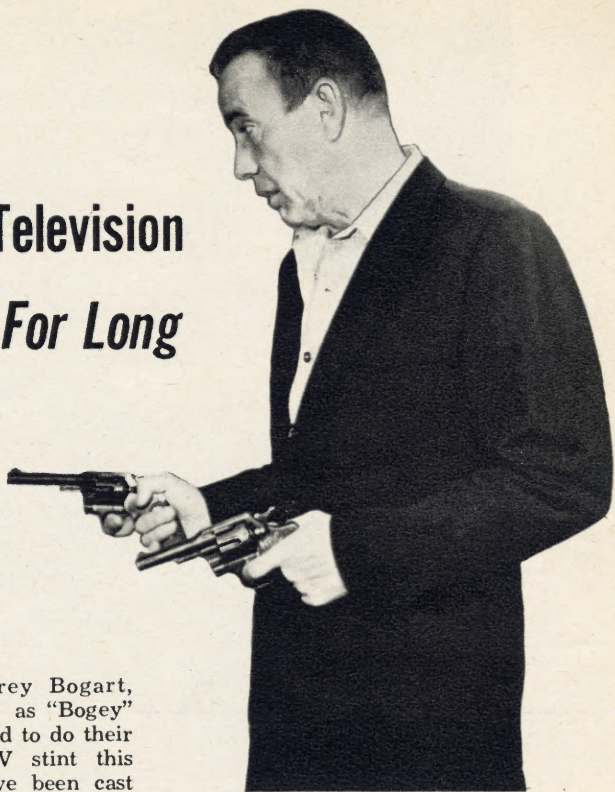

Indirect benefits have accrued to the show itself. As the result of the appearance of Kenneth Porter, the 36-year-old ex-GI whose fused spine will force him to remain in a standing position for the rest of his life, Edwards found himself on the receiving end of two awards—the Freedom Foundation's George Washington medal for contributing to the American way of life, and the President's Committee citation for promoting nationwide interest in the hiring of handicapped persons. Edwards likes to feel that this particular episode helped a good many others.

Edwards himself, quite possibly the most self-deprecating man in Hollywood, gets almost tongue-tied when asked to comment on these events.

"If we can do a little good along the way," he finally gets out, "that pleases us very much. I think a lot of the people we've had on the show haven't realized what really good people they are. The show, I think, serves to give them a sort of resurgence of spiritual belief in themselves."

Bogart's On Television

—But Not For Long

Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Bogart, known to their friends as "Bogey" and "Baby," are scheduled to do their first co-starring live TV stint this Monday, May 30. They've been cast as the bad man and the good girl in the Producers' Showcase version of "The Petrified Forest," NBC's first dramatic show from its new Burbank, Cal., color studio.

This "first" may well be a "last." Mr. and Mrs. Bogart are—and intend to remain—strictly motion picture people.

However, Bogart, a rather small man with deceptively husky shoulders and an interestingly-lined face, denies, more or less patiently, that he has ever made any really nasty remarks about television. Variety, a show business publication, quoted him a year ago as having said, in effect, that only movie has-beens find it necessary to get into television.

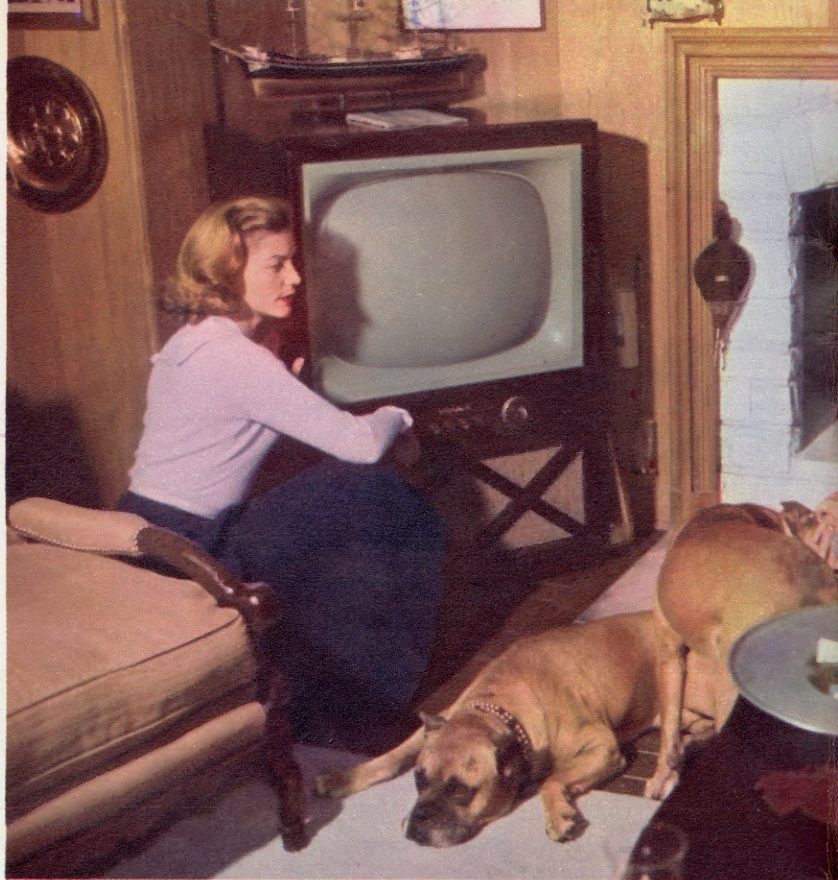

Queried by TV GUIDE shortly afterward, he hedged a bit: "No form of dramatic art is a haven just for has-beens, and television—these days, anyway—very definitely shows signs of being a dramatic art. My own personal feeling, however, is that I won't go into TV until I feel myself slipping."

Today Bogart suggests, with a tight smile somewhat reminiscent of a male Mona Lisa, that his opinions on the subject have been misinterpreted. "What I said," he insists, "and what I still say, is that a man can't work in both mediums at the same time, and I am a motion picture man.

"Reporters always get things twisted. I once said 90 percent continued of movie actresses are dumb dames. I figured every one of 'em would automatically include herself in the 10 percent escape clause I'd left 'em, but they jumped all over me. So I have since amended the statement. Ninety-five percent of all movie actresses are dumb dames."

That's what the man says. But he smiles, almost warmly, when he says it. Presumably, the woods are full of five percenters.

In a more serious vein, which Bogart can turn on like a spigot and which is his warmest and most likeable side, Hollywood's well-publicized tough guy gets almost soft-headed on the subject of "The Petrified Forest."

"Pure nostalgia," he admits. "That's the only reason I'm doing this show. And I doubt very, very much that I'll do any more television after this."

"But 'Petrified Forest' is the show that made me. It also made me a lot of money. I did it first with Leslie Howard on Broadway back around 1935. I forget just when. We made the inations were made and the Oscars awarded.

"I might do another show with Benny," he admits, "but that's all. I'm too old to be stage-struck any more. Whatever 'ham' is left in me is pretty well salted down at this point. Besides, as I keep saying, I'm a motion picture man. It's been my living and a pretty good one. I still say you can't do both.

"Look what's happened to Donald O'Connor—just plain beat physically. Maybe a movie guy can do an occasional TV shot, just as Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz do an occasional movie, but you can't work both sides of the street at once. All you get out of it is ulcers."

Bogart is critical of the over-all TV picture, complaining of the "long, dull hours" of old movies and routine crime shows, but he nevertheless spends a good deal of time in front of his set. He admires the hour-long New York live dramatic shows, particularly Studio One and Kraft Theater, and considers Sid Caesar one of the great comic talents.

With two children in the house (Stephen, 6, and Leslie, 3), the case-hardened Bogart is even more case-hardened on the subject of children's shows. "I'm an expert," he says wryly, "on Captain Video, Captain Jet, Ramar of the Jungle and that guy who is so good at getting the kids to drink milk." He is also an expert on, and avid fan of, Time for Beany.

Bogart dismisses, with the air of a Willie Mays facing a mediocre pitcher, any fears that he might freeze up when faced with a live TV camera for 90 on-stage minutes after all his years in the comfortable "Let's shoot it again" movie business.

"Naw," he shrugs. "Nothin' to it."

picture at Warners a year later—Leslie and myself and Bette Davis. It's a real easy role. I just sit there all by myself in the corner and look tough. And it's a great role for Betty." ("Betty" is what Mrs. Bogart is called when she isn't being called "Lauren" or "Baby.")

Henry Fonda, it should be added, will do the Howard role.

Bogart's first TV appearance was with Jack Benny two years ago; his second, with Ed Murrow on Person to Person; his third and fourth, as a host-presenter on the Academy Award telecasts in which the nom-

Our Guest Tonight . . . The President

If there's anyone who urgently requires more hours in the day and more days in the week, it's the President of the United States. Yet Presidents have been compelled to travel many miles, absenting themselves from Washington for days at a stretch, to deliver a 30- or 40-minute speech.

Closed-circuit television, whereby picture and sound are sent by cable to specified points for selected audiences, may change all that.

Dwight Eisenhower is the first to use what is shaping into a valuable aid for busy Presidents. He has made three closed-circuit appearances so far, and odds are there will be more.

The idea apparently originated with the Ford Motor Co. in 1953, when it invited Mr. Eisenhower to address a banquet for several thousands of its employes in Detroit. The closed-circuit aspect was novel and challenging; moreover, both business and labor were involved in the function. The White House accepted.

The President broadcast from the tiny television studio in the White House; in the Detroit banquet hall, his image appeared on a huge, theater-size screen.

Early this year, to help raise funds for the anti-Communist Radio Free Europe, the President simultaneously addressed meetings of the American Heritage Foundation in 35 cities. Potential large contributors, gathered in groups of 40 to 50 in TV studios and meeting rooms, saw and heard the

Mr. Eisenhower To Visit
—Without Leaving Home

President on regular TV receivers.

On Feb. 9, he was viewed on large screens by 23,000 physicians who were meeting in 32 cities under the auspices of the American Medical Association. His remarks opened a closed-circuit conference in which top medical experts discussed various heart ailments.

Mr. Eisenhower was slated for another closed-circuit talk in February, to open the Inter-American Investment Conference in New Orleans, but decided finally to film the speech, instead.

Although the White House isn't saying if or when another invitation will be accepted, it seems certain there will be other such appearances.

Closed-circuit talks are far from inexpensive, but the bill is picked up by the sponsoring organization or a group interested in getting the program telecast.

The circuit for the Radio Free Europe discussion, for instance, cost $36,000. In each of the 35 cities, a local committee paid part of the bill.

The 90-minute heart clinic cost approximately $100,000, including use of the large screens. In this case, a pharmaceutical firm paid the tab.

As in the President's regular network telecasts to the Nation, TV producer Robert Montgomery acts as technical adviser on the closed-circuit appearances.

The White House is scrutinizing closed-circuit invitations closely. James Hagerty, the President's press secretary, explains the Administration's policy as follows: when the President goes before TV cameras, generally it should be for the benefit of all who wish to see him, not for specific groups. The President must feel that any departure from policy is a matter of extremely great importance.

Will the use of closed circuits by the President move beyond public service into the realm of politics? Hagerty says the answer, up to now, is no. There are no plans, he says, to employ the medium in the 1956 Presidential campaign.

Practical party politicians, however, are way ahead of him. They see no reason why the President should not use closed-circuit video to address rallies and dinners of party workers and contributors around the Nation. And network executives are convinced that this is an inevitable development.

A live, large-screen telecast by the President, they point out, has much stronger impact than a film run off in a meeting room.—Florence Lowe.

Back To His First Love

Red-blooded American boys (up to the age of 10) can hold their heads up again, now that the ol' Range Rider is going back to his first love—the horse. He had even changed his name from Jack to Jock Mahoney to dabble in romance on The Loretta Young Show. After several leading roles, the six-foot-four, 200-pounder says he's had enough of this kissing stuff. He's going to do another Western series with a horse as his best girl and only baddies to complicate life.

Jock Mahoney has given up romance with Loretta Young to become good old range-riding Jack once more.

Chicago Dateline

That rumored junket of Steve Allen to Chicago won't take place right away. He'll originate his Tonight show from the West Coast, beginning the end of June, but will fly from New York to California without any stop-overs.

Memo to Daily Double producers: You are misspelling the name of Jack Drees' attractive co-star on the show credits. It's June Myers, not "Meyers."

WBBM-TV has dreamed up a new sports-and-weather show for John Harrington and P. J. Hoff. It's slated to fill the void left by the Perry Como Show which departs June 27.

Kyle Kimbro has just bowed in as a "pop" recording artist with two new tunes—"No One Seems to Care" and "Wildfire." Previously Kyle had waxed only children's recordings.

Francois Pope and sons Frank and Bob are cooking up something extra special for their June 3 Creative Cookery telecast. It marks their fourth anniversary.

Jim Hurlbut has been crowing to WNBQ co-workers about his skill as an angler since catching an 8½-pound walleyed pike last month in Wisconsin.

Jim bagged his prize catch on the first day of the fishing season.

A stellar quintet of WBBM-TV personalities—Len Dresslar, Pat Scot, Jim Conway, Lee Phillip and Ken Nordine will adorn a gala motorcade Saturday afternoon for the Police Benevolent Association. The parade on Michigan Ave. will be a curtain-raiser to P.B.A. stock car races that evening in Soldier Field.

The following Saturday La Grange will present its annual Pet Parade featuring TV's "Superman." The event will be televised over WGN-TV.

June Valli resumes her vocal assignments on Close Up Monday after taking a week's leave. The petite songstress spent the time resting up from the rugged tour with Ed Sullivan.

Norman Ross, now doing a late-evening stanza for WBKB, is a strong prospect to star in an early-morning platter-and-chatter program for Ch. 7.

Ex-pitchman Ron Terry is going all-out for success in his new venture as an entertainer. He is taking singing, dancing and voice lessons and is also learning to play the organ.

An "Inside" Show for Wayne

Wayne Griffin has gone in for long-range commuting. The wry-humored announcer flies to Pittsburgh on alternate week-ends to describe rasslin' telecasts for a local station there. The matches are studio-produced without an audience. Wayne denies, though, that the grapplers use a teleprompter or follow a script.

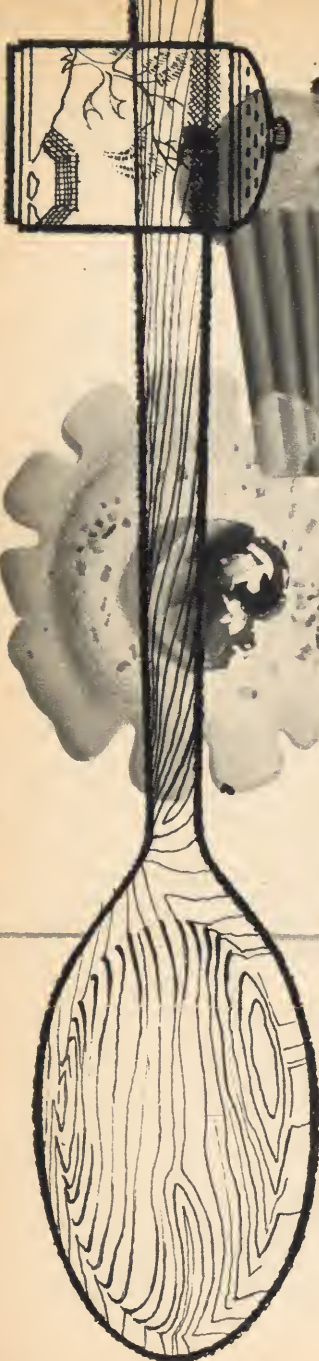

Whenever "those Bums," the Brooklyn Dodgers, hit Chicago, comic Kenny Bowers goes AWOL from TV to work out with them. The husky ex-New Jerseyite had a tryout with the team before he entered show business.

Arch Ward, WGN-TV's sportscaster, was heard on radio from three European capitals—Dublin, London and Paris—during his recent overseas tour. Arch broadcast portions of All-Star Sports Time, the network show he does with Harry Wismer.

Tom Duggan's Week-end Sports Final moves to the 5:30 P.M. Saturday spot, effective June 4. It's the third time change for the show this season.

Joe Wilson was doubly lucky with the Kentucky Derby this year. First he went on the air and predicted that the California speedster, Swaps, would win the event, then drew the horse in an office pool to win some extra cash.

Jack Drees will be honored by his alma mater, Austin High, and the Austin Kiwanis Club on June 16. The rangy sports chronicler was a star center on the school's basketball squad in the early Thirties. He'll be toasted at a testimonial banquet and be presented with a plaque as an outstanding grad.

The Petrified Forest by Robert E. Sherwood

COLOR The scene is the Black Mesa Bar B-Q and filling station, an isolated oasis in the Arizona desert. Here, among others, is restless Gabby Mople, who helps her father and grandfather to operate the place. She wants desperately to leave, but the men are opposed.

Then the bleak routine of desert life is interrupted by the arrival of two figures.

The first is Alan Squier, poet, idealist, intellectual. When the people at the station read news stories of Duke Mantee, bank robber and killer, Squier sees him as a symbol of the law of survival of the fittest.

The second figure is Mantee himself. With the aid of his trigger-happy cronies, Mantee takes over the place as a temporary hideout. Everyone present, and everyone who arrives, becomes Mantee's prisoner.

Bogart created the role of Mantee on Broadway in 1935; the late Leslie Howard played Squier. Both repeated the roles in the 1936 movie, when Bette Davis took the Gabby part, played by Mrs. Bogart tonight. (From Burbank, Col.)

G. E. Theater

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

The fact that it has persuaded a number of Hollywood's top names to try TV drama is only one of General Electric Theater's claims to attention. It is one of television's better half-hour series, sometimes live, sometimes on film, often commendably imaginative and not at all afraid to indulge in off-beat casting.

It was a fine idea, for example, to star Jack Benny as a mild-mannered clerk involved in a bank robbery, and to have Henry Fonda play the circus' sad-faced Emmett Kelly in "The Clown." Even when stars are cast in familiar roles (Myrna Loy as a glamorous lecturer; James Stewart as a laconic cowboy) the scripts usually compensate for the type-casting.

The show's stories deal with everything from romance to crime to mild digs at the movies, as when Ronald Reagan played a producer of "B" pictures who decided to adapt "War and Peace" to star a wonder horse.

Not every program is a winner, of course, but the show's over-all quality is excellent. Much of the credit probably belongs to host Reagan, who also has a hand in selecting the plays and players.

STAGE 7

Rushed in to replace Honestly, Celeste when the Celeste Holm show floundered early in the season, Stage 7 was barely rolling before a new Alfred Hitchcock series was announced as taking over its time next fall. That doesn't mean, however, that Stage 7 is a throwaway program. It's a generally good drama series.

The scripts usually concentrate on love themes, but not necessarily the boy-meets-girl type. One co-starred Ann Harding and Regis Toomey in an older-man-meets-older-woman yarn. Another, with Pat O'Brien, told of a father's love for his son. And occasionally the producers try a complete change of pace, as in a drama about a man's frantic long-distance efforts to save a friend from suicide. But not all the stories are world-beaters. Several, in fact—like the Pat O'Brien opus—border on soap opera.

The series is produced in thoroughly professional fashion by Four Star Productions, the Hollywood firm that turns out Four Star Playhouse.—R.S.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Atom, bomb test seen on TV after nine-day delay. With this thing, it's better never than late.

Some of the TV boys set a record. They went nine days without a drop.

After one week, they were ready to risk the fall-out just to get away from the craps tables. They figured gambling on the bomb would be cheaper than gambling at the roulette table. They managed to hang onto their steel helmets, but they were losing their shirts.

The boys finally figured they called it "zero hour" because nothing happened.

It was an eye-opening experience, especially with the eyes opening at 4:30 A.M. Then for nine days, nothing fell down except the eyelids. One guy spent so much time out at the bomb site, he came back with a Yucca tan. He was beginning to refer to the state as "Neverada."

This was the first time so many news hawks got up with the birds.

One guy spent every morning in the trench, and every night the gambling casino put him deeper in the hole.

After the eighth delay, he felt like Peter Pan in Never-Never Land.

Does Marriage Hurt TV Careers? Hopalong Cassidy Joshes Berle

HOLLYWOOD . . . The flurry of conjecture about the Eddie Fisher-Debbie Reynolds wedding plans, which recently moved from the gossip columns to the front page, brings up the thought that Mr. Peepers started to hit the rating skids when Wally Cox took a bride on and off the show . . . Bill Boyd, better known to kids as Hopalong Cassidy, bumped into Milton Berle at a night club and shouted, "Hey Milt, whatever happened to us on television?"

■ You'll be seeing more of Sheree North on TV soon. When Sheree volunteered as a blood donor recently, the nurse asked, "Do you know your type?" "Sure do," said the curvaceous dancer, "I'm the sultry type."

■ Jackie Gleason's sponsors have a four weeks' cancellation clause in their contract, just in case next season's half-hour filmed version of The Honeymooners falls below his live show standard . . . No laughs will be dubbed into the sound track, Jackie assures me. "I'd hate to do something on our show," he said, "that was a laugh on someone else's." Jackie describes himself as "today's Horatio Alger." "The only difference between me and Alger's heroes," he says, "is that I started with 36 cents."

■ I had to blink and do a double take when I bumped into Gracie

Allen the other day. One half of her head was dyed platinum blonde; the other half, a vivid red. No, she hadn't flipped; she was getting ready for color TV tests . . . Bob Hope was his own best audience watching his "This Is Your Life, Lassie" howler. What you saw on his recent show was a film made at the dress rehearsal the night before the show. Bob decided it couldn't possibly be any better. Bob, by the way, is scheduled to be in Australia as you read this.

Sheree North: typed.

■ James Mason gives this reason for his Lux Video Theater exit: "They want someone less expensive." They also want someone with a better memory for live TV . . . Gregory Peck will make his first live TV appearance on Toast of the Town in Ed Sullivan's "John Huston Story" in the fall—officially, to sell his "Moby Dick" picture . . . Lassie just got a check-up, because his TV producers want to insure their star with Lloyd's of London for $150,000 . . . Pinky Lee's new Beverly Hills home is costing more than $100,000. There's gold in them thar kidsth!

■ John Cameron Swayze's favorite fan letter is from the mother who wrote that her three-year-old son concludes his prayers with, "Well, that's the story, Lord. Glad we could get together. Amen."

NEXT WEEK: EARL WILSON

CROCKETT & CO.

Davy and Polly: she's Helene Stanley, former model for Disney cartoonists.

Walt Disney, who has performed some rather startling feats, was at his startling best when he dug deeply to provide company for Davy Crockett (Fess Parker) on his march from the Frontier into the homes and hearts of America. Disney picked a veteran Broadway and Hollywood dancer, Buddy Ebsen, as George Russell, who fights and frolics with Davy until both go down at the Alamo. For Andrew ("Old Hickory") Jackson, Disney hit upon Basil Ruysdael, a long-time radio announcer, noted for his mellifluous tones. Davy's wife, Polly, is Helene Stanley, actress-singer-dancer who was the model for Disney's "Cinderella" and "Sleeping Beauty." Parker, a minor movie and TV actor (before Disney), is shown at left as Davy.

Andy Jackson: radio announcer Basil Ruysdael is rugged President.

George Russell: Davy's sidekick is Buddy Ebsen, a one-time dancer.

How Do They Ever Get On The Air?

A Glimpse Of A Martin And Lewis Rehearsal

Storm warning: one Martin and Lewis rehearsal period ended a couple of weeks ago; another—for their June 5 Comedy Hour—is now under way.

There are legends about these rehearsals. They deal with demolished sets, men stripped of their shirts, women sprayed by water rifles, chairs yanked from under, forests of burning matches planted in shoe soles.

Once, it's said, Dean Martin walked away from a wrangle between Jerry Lewis and producer Ernie Glucksman, picked up a prop phone and bellowed, "Hello, somebody. Do me a favor, huh? Fix it so ol' Deano and Jer' can have eight days in this week. We ain't never gonna get this show on the air by Sunday!"

Once Martin arrived an hour and a quarter late, while Lewis was auditioning for skits. Lewis put down his script and applauded. "Here comes that famous actor," he announced. "Have you seen his latest record?"

Martin, looking sleepy and cross, slumped into a chair. "Ah, shut up," he said, "I hate television. I hate television," he repeated, glaring at Dick Weinberg, the director.

"Well, don't look at me," Weinberg said. "I didn't invent it."

Glucksman took a sip of coffee from a paper cup. "The rehearsal is now official," he said.

Jerry constantly expresses his affection for his partner by tapping cigaret ashes into Martin's hair, then smiling in cross-eyed innocence.

Except for rehearsing his songs, when he comes to life with a snap, Martin is relaxed to the point of indifference—kidding the chorus girls, swapping jokes with engineers, phoning his tailor or simply napping.

Lewis buzzes around like a souped-up bee, working out camera angles, orchestra introductions, sight gags, dance routines and script problems. He passes with dizzying rapidity from one personality to another. One moment he is the typical Jerry Lewis, a simple goof Martin is leading around by the jaw; the next moment he thinks of a funnier way of being led around by the jaw, and the roles are reversed.

Deadly serious, keenly analytical, Lewis becomes the final authority on what's funny. "That's no good," he says. "We'll do it like this." Martin listens patiently and obediently.

Shortly before show time one Sunday afternoon Glucksman coached the 80 actors, dancers and technicians on their cues. Then Lewis took over, leaving no doubt in anyone's mind that every detail of the program, from the opening fanfare to a minor bit in a sketch, was of great importance.

He spoke calmly, methodically and cheerfully, dropping in gags to relieve the last-minute tension.

"I guess that's about all," he concluded, looking around, "except for Dean. Oh, well, don't worry about Dean. There's only one thing I want him to do for this show. I just want him to change his entire personality."

When are you really grown up?

There was a time when you wanted things to prove your maturity, like high-heeled slippers or your own key. But all these privileges seem unimportant when you're really grown up. Then you make decisions because they're best for you—not just to prove a point.

Take sanitary protection, for example. Almost every woman who uses the internal method has made the grown-up decision to adopt it because she believes it's best for her. She may have learned about it from a friend, her doctor or from a Tampax ad. But basically, she's weighed the Tampax advantages herself. Here they are:

1. Tampax prevents odor from forming.
2. Tampax is both invisible and unfelt when in place—does away with the whole belt-pin-pad harness.
3. Tampax is easy to dispose of.
4. Tampax is so small, month's supply slips into purse.
5. Tampax can be worn in tub or shower.
6. Wearer's hands need not even touch the Tampax.

Tampax is available at drug or notion counters in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Stunt Girl's Stunt Girl

Double Doubles For Double
In 'So This Is Hollywood'

Professional stunt girl Shirley Lucas is about to leap from a balcony (above) as she doubles for Mitzi Green on So This Is Hollywood. Mitzi, a stunt girl in the script, was supposed to be taking this risk for an old friend, a man. After donning a vest to match Mitzi's costume, Shirley leaped (right) to do battle with a husky fellow. Then Mitzi (far right) moved in.

If you see double as you read this, just relax. We are about to engage in a little double-talk, but all should be clear in the end. It starts this way: Mitzi Green plays a stunt girl on the show, So This Is Hollywood. Generally, she is doubling for "movie star April Adams" (played by Peggy Knudsen) to protect that expensive Adams' neck—or so the scripts read.

However, last month the script called for Mitzi—disguised as a man—to leap from a balcony to a barroom floor 12 feet below and slug it out with a bruiser. This feat was too much for "stunt girl" Mitzi, even though she said she was willing to try. So, a stunt girl (a real one, Shirley Lucas, a blonde who looks remarkably like Mitzi) was hired to double for the double.

The results you see on these pages.

All's well: Mitzi Green, left, and Shirley Lucas relaxing on set after the day's hectic work had ended.
